TUDA FRINGE AT TUC DISABILITY CONFERENCE

The Council Chamber (5th Floor) 1pm Thursday 22nd May

TUDA Trade Union Charter for Disability Equality

This is an opportunity to hear from unions who have signed up to the Charter, to ask questions about the Charter, and to discuss how we can use the Charter to move towards equality within our unions and the workplace. It is also an opportunity to give your views on what trade unions' priorities should be in working towards Disability Equality.

Welcome — bring your lunch with you!

TUDA AGM 26 APRIL LONDON

TUDA's AGM was a lively and well attended day, which covered a range of contemporary issues in the disability movement.

Julie Newman Chair of UKDPC spoke about the challenges and changes confronting the organisations.

Liz Sayce Chief Executive of RADAR spoke more generally about key political issues for disabled people. People think disability equality is 'done'. We DO have disability rights law – now we need to make it central in new developments: 3 million new homes, future of social care, meeting Britain's skills shortages, employment and child poverty targets, justice.....

For which we need wider alliances e.g. on independent living – women's and carers' organisations, social care organisations, unions, and business. We need to: go beyond the idea that disability led means ONLY disabled people involved; be at decision-making tables; Scrutiny nationally and locally

Local solutions e.g. challenging eligibility criteria Harrow, Lewisham.

Influencing housing, building control, transport...A groundswell: disabled people and trade unionists using DED and influence

Richard Howitt MEP long time disability campaigner spoke about recent developments in Europe – in particular the prospect of a European Directive (law) banning disability discrimination in goods and services – which will bolster some aspects of our UK law – and spread rights throughout Europe

Henrietta Spalding Head of Professional Development, Changing Faces gave a fantastic talk on the problems confronting workers with facial disfigurement – amazing how the barriers are so similar for all disabled people – Prejudice is prejudice I guess. In terms of support from the unions - it would be great if we could raise their awareness of the challenges that workers with disfigurements face and how they might help support individuals both through access to good information and support e.g. through Changing Faces but also by encouraging employers to develop best practice in terms of service delivery - again we can provide guidance on this.

An inspiring day – and great to have delegates from Scotland Northern Ireland and all over England. Next year we'll add in some Welsh delegates!

Independent Living Strategy

The Government has just published the Independent Living Strategy. This is a cross-departmental strategy. The National Centre for Independent Living said in their press release “NCIL believes the strategy contains an array of interesting ideas and measures to tackle barriers to disabled people’s equality and independence”. The pan-departmental approach outlined in the strategy is a welcome step forward bringing about equality of access for disabled people in areas such as housing, education, employment, benefits, leisure opportunities and health and social care support. However, NCIL is disappointed that there is no commitment to legislation to guarantee disabled people the right to reach their full potential as equal citizens.

The Office of Disability Issues (ODI) is holding a number of consultation events around the country so here are your chance to say what you think about the Independent Living Strategy. Alternatively, the ODI will take written, audio and spoken responses as well. There are two events that have been organised: 4th June Brit Oval in London
The Live Group      Tel No: 0208 481 3317 Type talk: 1800-1020-84813317      Website: livegroup.co.uk/independentliving Email address: odi.independentlivingconference@livegroup.co.uk
The consultation seeks views on how to involve disabled people in the implementation and monitoring of the Government’s Independent Living Strategy.

For example, two possibilities are:

- Setting up an Independent Living Scrutiny Group, to monitor – at a national level – annual progress on the Strategy
- Supporting networks of disabled people to be involved at regional and local levels in implementation and monitoring of the Strategy.

Respond by: 20 June 2008. You can respond by post or email:

Address: Independent Living Review, Office for Disability Issues, The Adelphi, 1-11 John Adam Street, London, WC2N 6HT

Telephone: 0207 712 2845 Textphone: 0207 712 2032

There will be a lobby on this strategy on 11th June at the House of Commons from 2-4. This will be preceded by a rally outside Downing Street from 11 onwards. This is being co-ordinated by our lives our choices. Key demands are for a legislative right to independent living, an end to the current lottery of social care provision to save DLA and Attendance Allowance.

The strategy includes pledges to: review charging against the disability equality duty remove disincentives in the benefits system to taking up public appointments and initiatives to promote better understanding of independent living, boost disabled peoples leadership and involvement and develop user led advocacy and brokerage.

The radical reform programme disabled people want is not included in the Human Rights Ratification

The UK Government is intending to ratify the UN Convention but with reservations on a number of key areas. This is totally unacceptable as it signals that the UK is committed to the continuing abuse of our human rights.

A new petition has been set up on the Downing Street website to address this issue at: www.petitions.pm.gov.uk Please sign and circulate widely to your networks

D.A.N Action Report - 17th April 2008

Today more than twenty disabled activists occupied the foyer of Adelphi House, where the Department of Work and Pensions is based. At 1.30 p.m. campaigners breezed in, taking over the foyer, leafleting and asking to hand deliver a letter to James Purnell, Secretary of State for the Department of Work and Pensions. Members of D.A.N. the Disabled people's Direct Action Network refused to leave until a meeting was arranged with James Purnell to discuss Incapacity Benefit and the changes which are forcing one million disabled people into poverty and unpaid work placements. James Purnell was out of the country, so D.A.N. activists met with representatives from the DWP and Sally Witcher from the Office for Disability Issues and held long discussions.

The result of these discussions is, D.A.N. have been promised a meeting with James Purnell, the date of which is to be confirmed. “We are very confident that the meeting will happen as we have promised to come back for another visit if it doesn't.”

Changing Faces – Henrietta Spalding talked to delegates at the TUDA AGM and Conference on the 26th April, 2008.

Henrietta Spalding head of professional development for Changing Faces – the way you face disfigurement.

Henrietta explained that disfigurement is the generic term

- for the aesthetic and/or functional
- effect of scars, asymmetry, paralysis,
- surgery on face, hands and body

- from any cause
  - birth condition
  - accident/trauma
  - cancer treatment
  - eye conditions
  - skin conditions
  - facial paralysis (including Bells' Palsy)

Henrietta informed us that The definition of disability under the Disability Discrimination Act has been extended to include people with disfigurements as it is recognised that society discriminates against them as much as any other disabled person. In fact in many cases Facial disfigurement is sometimes thought/assumed to be the very worst thing that can happen – the face is, after all, where we look, express our feelings, laugh, our fortune... Medical interventions (e.g. plastic surgery after burns) can sometimes make disfigurement less conspicuous but it can rarely be removed. This results in everyday social encounters (making friends, going to shop, travelling on bus), other people's reactions can vary from: Staring, Pity, Curiosity, Embarrassment, Avoidance, and Name-calling, prejudice and discrimination. Individuals report many different experiences - based on their appearance, often they are treated badly and unfairly. These can include

- Inaccurate assumption made at interview
- Under / unemployment
- Lower expectations of performance by line managers
Lack of opportunity of front line positions / promotion
- Colleagues questions
- Negative experiences – teasing, staring, questions, double-takes, names, exclusion
- Colleagues behaviours' - ridicule, ostracism, abuse

Changing Faces has designed and proven a “living with...” package of “disfigurement life-skills” involving:

- F FINDING OUT
- A ATTITUDE-BUILDING
- C COUNSELLING and ADVICE
- E EXCHANGING EXPERIENCES

SOCIAL INTERACTION SKILLS TRAINING

What can employers do and how can trade unionists representatives help?

- Ensure their staff are informed and engaged in the issues that people with disfigurement face.
- Ensure their staff are equipped to work confidently with people with disfigurement
- Recruit, retain and promote individuals with disfigurements fairly and equally
- Provide employees with disfigurements with access to a range of interventions based on the Changing Faces model ensure their self-confidence
- Deliver best practice for all creating a culture of equality and inclusion
- Changing Faces, as a Catalyst for Change, seeks to inform and encourage employers about the effects of living with disfiguring conditions
- Changing faces can provide disfigurement confidence training to employers and their staff
- Changing Faces can support companies in meeting their employees needs
- Changing Faces can support companies to ensure that they deliver good practice in recruitment, employment, retention and promotion for people with disfigurements

ICTU Joint Disability Committee Seminar - Dublin

This was the first joint seminar held by the disability committees of the ICTU and NIC-ICTU entitled "Trade Unions - ensuring the rights of people with disabilities in the workplace" The seminar was held at the Crowne Plaza Hotel close to Dublin Airport on Friday 2nd and Saturday 3rd November attracting over 40 delegates from both the Republic and Northern Ireland.

Day 1 was chaired by Deirdre O'Connor, Chair of the Republic of Ireland Disability Committee. The first speaker was ICTU General Secretary David Begg. David welcomed delegates and commended the work of all involved with ICTU and NIC-ICTU regarding disability issues, particularly the Workway and Disability Champions projects. He talked about a number of ongoing campaigns including that for a 40 Euros per week 'cost of disability' payment for disabled workers and a payment equal to 100% of average industrial earnings for those disabled people for whom work is not possible. (by the way, Angela Kerins, Chair of the National Disability Authority talked about barriers faced by disabled people getting into employment. She placed a lot of focus on the benefit trap and the fact that people lose benefits and more importantly their medical cards if they earn more than 120 Euros; this can be difficult to get back and presents a risk that many are not prepared to take.

Angela was followed by keynote speaker Gerard Quinn of the Irish Human Rights Commission talking about the UN Convention on the rights of disabled people. It was interesting to hear a view from the inside regarding the attitude to disabled people's rights from countries around the world tinged with a hint of some of the possible motives behind this. Questioned about which country he felt was most committed to change and reform his answer was quite clear; China, not the country that would have sprung into most people's minds.

The day's first politician was Gerry Mulligan who heads up disability issues in the Office of the First Minister. He reminded delegates of Ireland's commitment to a measurable improvement of the lives of disabled people by 2012. He talked about the 2005 Disability Discrimination Order, which is very similar in scope to the UK Disability Equality Duty requiring public sector organisations to positively promote employment of disabled people. In the Republic this has involved the introduction of a 3% quota system. For further information on the content of Gerry's input see www.equalityni.org and www.nisra.gov.uk

After lunch Dave Parr, Disability Champion TUC Tutor gave a presentation about the Disability Champions project, its history and progress to date. Almost 700 Champions trained in England, Scotland and Wales. The concept was well received and there were a number of questions before the workshop activities to get the views of delegates.

Ann McKernon, Equality Commission for Northern Ireland talked about a number of cases that they had taken and reported both in and out of court settlements. Some of these bore little resemblance to what delegates felt would be reasonable compensation especially for the loss of a job.

Minister Dr Jimmy Devlin, T.D. Mental health & disabilities was the final speaker of the day. His speech commended the work of the trade unions and praised the ICTU for Workway and Disability Champions@Work.

Day 2 was chaired by the NIC-ICTU Chair, Max O'Brien, and the first speaker was Irelands Disability Champions@Work project worker Jane Clare. Jane explained the project and role from an Irish perspective. She has done a great job adapting the training course to suit the legal and support system for disability and disabled people in the Republic and will do a similar task for the North. Her presentation led into some quality time for discussion and debate with delegates and speakers alike. This was an excellent second day following quite an intense day one which had lots of information for people to take in and not much time for discussion. In the middle of the session Pauline Ryder gave a presentation about the AHEAD project getting disabled people into supported employment. She touched on a number of issues that linked very closely to Disability Champions such as having a workplace advocate, understanding the social model of disability. This was Max O'Brien's final event as Chair of the NIC-ICTU disability committee and it was very fitting that it should be a joint venture. Tribute was paid to Max by a number of the participants who wish him well for the future.
